Workshop, 12-1:30 p.m.
Rose Center for the Arts, Room 220

Reading, Longview Public Library at 6:30 p.m.

Lyndsay Faye is the internationally bestselling author of five novels including her latest, Jane Steele, a reimagining of Jane Eyre as a heroic vigilante murderess. The first book in her Timothy Wilde trilogy, The Gods of Gotham, was nominated for an Edgar Award for Best Novel and translated into fourteen languages. She writes Sherlock Holmes pastiches regularly for the Strand Magazine, and these plus several others will be gathered into a collection for her forthcoming The Whole Art of Detection: Lost Mysteries of Sherlock Holmes. Faye grew up in Longview, Washington, where she attended Robert. A. Long High School and took advanced English classes from Northwest author Jim LeMonds. She lives in Queens with her husband and fellow RAL graduate Gabriel Lehner.
