Welcome to Fall Quarter 2020! As we open to serve students it is important to remember our duty to follow protocols that help prevent the spread of COVID.

A key requirement set by the State of Washington is that all employees who do not work alone must wear a cloth or equivalent face covering while on the job site.

Someone is considered to be working alone when they are isolated from interaction with other people and have little or no expectation of in-person interruption.

Examples of working alone include:

- A lone worker inside a cab of heavy equipment or a vehicle.
- A person by themselves inside an office with four walls and a door.
- A lone worker inside of a cubicle with four walls that are above the head of the seated or standing desk cubicle worker, and whose work does not require anyone else to come inside the cubicle.
- A worker by themselves outside in an open area with no anticipated contact with others. Please note any of our staff working outside who could be approached by a student or employee for assistance must be wearing a face covering.

A face covering should cover your nose and mouth. Wearing a face covering incorrectly will not prevent the spread of disease.

Visit our webpage for more information about face covering requirements on campus.